

Estelle Morris

External Director

Estelle Morris worked as a teacher at the inner-city Sidney Stringer School in Coventry and was a member of Warwick District Council from 1979 to 1991. She was elected to Parliament in 1992, became a minister in the Department for Education and Employment in 1997 and was promoted to Secretary of State for Education and Skills in 2001.

She quit her job in 2002, explaining that she didn't feel up to it, and rejoined the government the following year as Minister for the Arts. In September 2004, she announced her intention to step down as an MP, and so as a minister, at the next general election. Estelle was appointed as an External Director of PRS in September 2005.
